

PRESS RELEASE

Dan Wright takes the second place spot in Top Technician Competition

Dan Wright, of Clive Atthowe Tuning, Norwich, was announced as the runner-up in the intensely fought competition, which saw over 600 workshop technicians from around the country vying for the coveted title and the 'Top Technician'

The awards presentation took place as the culmination of the inaugural 'Top Technician Live' symposium at the Mercedes-Benz World conference facility in Brooklands, Surrey,

Commenting on what is undoubtedly the ultimate scrutiny of a technician's professional skills, 'Top Technician 2012' chief examiner Ian Gillgrass of the Institute of the Motor Industry, (IMI) – the competition's on-going technical partner - said:

The pace of advancement in vehicle systems is relentless, so every year the examiners have to make the tests more searching and intensive. All technicians have to constantly raise their game to stay abreast of the technology the performance through every phase of the competition was of the highest order – right out of the top drawer of the toolbox.

The Top Technician competition is organised by the leading trade journal, 'Aftermarket', and is open to workshop technicians from all sectors of the UK vehicle servicing industry.
